1 Configuration change procedure

Procedure

1. Your current billing method is displayed on the overview page of the Dynamic Route for CDN console. To change it, click Change Billing Method.

2. On the top of the Change Billing Method page, your current billing method is displayed. Beneath this are the billing methods you can change. Select one and click Confirm Change.
3. After the current billing cycle ends, the system enables the change of billing method on the next calendar day at 00:00. The enabling process typically takes 1-10 minutes. New configuration changes cannot be submitted for a Dynamic Route for CDN instance while a change to the same instance is still pending.

2 Overdue payment description

About service suspension

- If you do not pay the bill for a Dynamic Route for CDN service, the service goes into outstanding payment.
- If your service remains in arrears for 24 hours, your service is suspended. In the 24 hours before your service is suspended, the system sends an email or an SMS reminding you to pay the overdue bill.
 - If you top up within 24 hours of your account entering arrears, your service is not suspended.
 - If you do not top up in time, your Dynamic Route for CDN service is suspended . The cache resources you are then using are released, but your configuration information is retained for 12 months.

Balance warning prompt

Billing method	Judgment basis	Forecast
PayByBandwidth	Amount payable for the last billing cycle (days)	Whether the balance in your account sufficient for payment of the next billing cycle (days)
PayByTraffic	The average amount payable under the bill for the last seven hours	Whether the balance in your account is sufficient for payment of the next three billing cycles

If the balance in your account is insufficient, the system sends you an SMS or email warning.

Note:

If you have enabled the balance warning feature, (console > Account Management > Balance Warning ON/OFF), the system sends you an SMS or email warning when the balance in your account is under the threshold you have set.
